By Material, the global Luxury Handbag market is segmented into cotton, leather, synthetic, and Nylon. In 2018, Leather segment dominated the luxury handbag market and is expected to retain its dominance in the forecasted period. It is mainly due to premium finish and elegant looks of the leather products. In addition to this, the leather material handbags have a long life and others and hence find more demand in return to these amazing features. However, synthetic material handbags are also gaining the market due to the better functionality, therefore, boosting market growth with a higher CAGR in the forecast period. It is expected that luxury handbags market will grow at a CAGR of ~XX% during the forecast period.

By Distribution Channel, the global Luxury Handbag market is segmented into Online distribution channel and Offline distribution channel. Offline distribution channel has the dominant position in the Luxury Handbag market due to the rising number of supermarkets and hypermarket giving excess to consumers easily all around the world. Although with the e-commerce rise, the online distribution channels market share grows with higher CAGR in the forecast period.

Global Luxury Handbag Market– Geographical Analysis

By geography, the global Luxury Handbag market is segmented into North America, Asia-Pacific (APAC), Europe, South America, and the Middle East and Africa (MEA).

Europe holds the largest market share for Luxury Handbag due to rise in the supermarket and hypermarket culture and high rise in the number of working women populations will be the significant drivers for luxury handbag market in the region.

With investment and development in Eastern Europe are continually growing. Poland is entering its third decade of dynamic growth with new overseas retailers and luxury brands entering the market with thirty new global brands set up operations in the country last few years. There is a retail boom in Russia as 63 new complexes in 40 Russian cities have been completed. There is a positive attitude in Western Europe of investment in outdated shopping centers to allow retailers to expand locally.
