Beginning on Wednesday, Sept. 23 at 8 p.m., each show will run approximately 60 minutes in length. Curran will serve as the host for a roundtable that will include current or former professional athletes and coaches, as well as a topic expert.

High school superintendents, athletic directors, coaches and, most importantly, athletes and their parents throughout the state are invited to attend this free event. The high school with the most student-athlete attendees each week will receive a $500 scholarship provided by Sports Turf. Search "Athlete 2 Athlete" on Eventbrite.com to register or click here.

"I have walked in the shoes of these student-athletes," said Curran. "I understand and appreciate the impact that an individual can have on others, and my goal is to impart knowledge from those that have traveled before them. With COVID-19, they need our support and encouragement more than ever, and I want to leverage my network to make a difference in their lives."

Sports Turf's sponsorship of the Athlete 2 Athlete program is part of a larger partnership between the company and Game Changers Foundation.
