

A Haunted Doll to Spook Up Your Halloween

Use Lily this season to ward other ghosts and ghouls around Halloween.

NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, September 15, 2020

/EINPresswire.com/ -- This October, set the mood by welcoming a new friend into your house. Her name is Lily, and she's a haunted doll and effigy, following a Viking tradition to ward off evil spirits. She is modeled after the Countess Elizabeth Báthory, commonly referred to as the female Dracula. She is surprisingly good at both warding off ghosts and scaring your friends. Lily was sent to the team at US Ghost

Adventures by a woman who found her at her doorstep one morning and took her in. She came with a warning, which, in part, read, "do not put her by mirrors or in the same room you sleep in, she likes red, that is all I know." She was known to turn lights on and off, create smells of burnt toast, and move around on her own. After sharing the story on social media, people started requesting their own Lily - usually to scare others in their household.

With feedback from Lily's previous host and some creepy discovery of their own, US Ghost Adventures created instructions for everyone to enjoy and use Lily. She works well hidden in a wreath, on a shelf, and in other nooks to scare your family, roommate, or co-workers, while keeping more harmful ghosts at bay. Lily: Host a Ghost is the "Elf on the Shelf" for Halloween season to ward off other ghosts and scare your friends!

Lily's Background

The old Viking tradition of warding off ghosts with an effigy at Halloween was imported to Lower Manhattan by Dutch Settlers. The custom of using Lily to ward off ghosts at Halloween is made new again by US Ghost Adventures.

She's Spooky and Mischievous

Upon researching the doll's origins, she was crafted to mimic the infamous

Elizabeth Bathory. She was a noblewoman condemned in the 1600s for killing over 650 people, and is referred to as the 'Blood Countess' and 'Countess Dracula.' Lily contains part of the Countess' menace. Lily is a limited-edition doll reproduced alongside the original Lily. She's the best way to spice up the spirit of Halloween season in your home, and the perfect gift, as she can both protect and haunt!
