TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA,

EINPresswire.com/ -- RCU - Responsible Cannabis Use has partnered with CPHR Manitoba to make cannabis education in the workplace accessible. CannEd, developed by RCU is a cannabis e-learning course that prioritizes safety and inclusivity through education.

“CPHR Manitoba represents HR professionals in a variety of industries who are navigating how to handle cannabis in the workplace, and there is a need for quality information from reliable sources,” says Ron Gauthier, CEO & Registrar, CPHR Manitoba. “We’re excited to bring CannEd to our membership to help HR professionals learn how to have factual and evidence-informed conversations about cannabis and its relation to safety and impairment in the workplace.”

Based on a survey conducted by RCU in 2019, 80% of employees and people managers want cannabis education at work. The partnership between RCU and CPHR Manitoba gives their members and their organization access to CannEd at an exclusive rate. Visit thercu.org/collections/cphrmb to learn more.

“Cannabis education in the workplace is not only about safety but also about inclusivity. All major Canadian group benefits insurers are now offering medical cannabis coverage to their plan sponsors in response to plan member demand. Cannabis education in the workplace goes hand in hand with the implementation of this coverage by plan sponsors to ensure inclusivity for medical cannabis patients in the workplace,” said Karina Karassev, COO at RCU.

CannEd is available for HR professionals, employees, and people managers across Canada. It is an approved Continuing Professional Development credit for HR professionals in Manitoba, Alberta, and Ontario.
