BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, September 28, 2020

/EINPresswire.com/ -- With the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic everyone is hoarding disinfecting products and personal protective equipment. Consequently, the PPE industry witnessed a surge in demand. Given the increased demand many companies diversified their supply chains and set foot in the PPE manufacturing world.

Brooklyn Equipment is working on producing and selling the PPE that they would personally use their kids. Brooklyn Equipment promised to offer a transparent information to all clients.”

George Popescu, CEO of Brooklyn Equipment

In the same vein, various PPE companies made fake claims, showing the products in stock while the inventories were empty. Product shipping often took more than one month, destroying the customer trust. To address this issue Brooklyn Equipment was launched with a simple plan to keep stock for all products available for sale.

process and material as well.

Huge companies are unable to optimize the quality control department for PPE products, such as Etsy, Amazon, and eBay. Also, they tend to sell products in bulk quantities, which makes it tedious for them to check the quality or optimize the quality standards. Smaller and medium companies therefore also stood in to address this issue.
