TranscriptionWing™ is hosting a webinar on adapting to rising data security demands and their potential impact on investor relations. The webinar will be held on September 29th at 1PM ET.

Businesses worldwide are experiencing unprecedented levels of change in the tools they communicate, resulting in a certain degree of uneasiness among shareholders and investors. Data security has now become a business issue, and not just a technology issue.

As the need heightens for increased security in quality investor relations reporting, so does the necessity for tools and services that can be used by IR professionals to enable them to effectively disclose data securely to both shareholders or investors. With the demands of this environment professionals face another challenge –an increasing dependency on cloud and collaboration platforms or digital services that can entail more vulnerabilities in security.

As a leading provider of secure transcriptions since 2005, TranscriptionWing will share its expertise on how to adapt to evolving data security demands and how to engage with service partners to ensure that data is safeguarded without compromising quality or security.
