Silicon Valley-based i360 Healthcare announced today that they have introduced a new and advanced system for Remote Patient Monitoring with advanced healthcare clinical monitoring and patient interaction services to the marketplace.

i360 Healthcare has become a trusted healthcare consulting company for hospitals, accountable care organizations and physicians groups across the United States. The i360 platform collects patient vitals and biometrics via multiple, patient-centric healthcare IoT devices and natural language processors, analyzes the data and simultaneously populates multiple EMRs/EHRs with the patient health information in their native format as defined by the organizations clinical team.

Steve C. Lipp, Chief Executive Officer and President of i360 Healthcare, has extensive experience in finance and management. He has been part of executive team for over 8 years.

Dr. David A Wanner, EdD, Chief Administrative Officer of i360 Healthcare, has extensive C-Suite experience in healthcare enterprises.

“Our new systems and extensive clinical monitoring brings a new layer of dynamic capabilities to I360 Healthcare. While our i360 platform has long had the capability of delivering telehealth and remote monitoring services to patients, we can now offer a robust, patient clinical care to our customers on an instantaneous basis. We are focused on moving forward to become an industry leader in this space.”

“We now have access to a national team of medical providers and specialists.
