

Careficient Announces the Acquisition of Complia Health's IGEA home health agency management system

JENSEN BEACH, FL, UNITED STATES, October 5, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Careficient Announces the Acquisition of Complia Health's IGEA product

IGEA will join Careficient, expanding Careficient's software-as-a-solution (SaaS) offerings and reach to wider range of Healthcare customers

Jensen Beach Florida – October 1st, 2020 – Careficient, a leader in home health, hospice and private duty agency management SaaS solutions, announced it has completed its acquisition from Complia Health, a leading home health and hospice technology solutions provider, all the stock of Indura Systems, Inc., the owner of the Igea home health software solution. Under the agreement, Careficient will assume all operations of the Igea business effective October 1, 2020.

"IGEA and its team are great additions to Careficient's growing SaaS business. Our goal is to help home health, hospice and private duty providers better manage their business and improve the lives of their patients as an aging population shifts to homecare and other lower-cost settings," said Bill Creach, Founder and CEO of Careficient. We look forward to welcoming the talented and committed employees on the Igea team, and for Careficient to continue a positive relationship with Complia Health moving forward as two key providers in the home health and hospice industries."
