A New Battleground For Business

2020 is an election year, and this year is going to be unlike any other. The incumbent, President Donald Trump, faces many challenges and has a base of supporters that is more energized than ever before. It's safe to say that no Republican President has ever enjoyed a base of support as committed as the current one. That zeal and loyalty to the President have one crucial knock on effect: fanatical market support.

It may be because of his roots as a businessman, but no President in history has ever garnered as much ancillary market support as successfully as President Trump. For Trump allies, or simply those interested in tapping the Trump market, this presents an aggressive, highly responsive base of hungry customers to spend money on any potential product that makes them feel closer to their President in one of the most contentious election years in generations.

Big Numbers

It's statistically estimated that about 30% of the American population is a dedicated Trump supporter. Doing the math means that in a population of over 328 million, over 98 million people are fanatically dedicated to the President and enthusiastically willing to support products and services associated with him.

Even more telling, most Trump supporters are uneducated white males, a demographic that is especially susceptible to marketing and the right targeted approach. With the right approach, this market can be effectively tapped for various products and an aggressive sales strategy. The enthusiasm of this base and their willingness to donate or purchase Trump-related products and services make this a significant, repeating business opportunity that can be exploited again and again. A variety of different products can be offered, such as:

MAGA Products

The "Make America Great Again" slogan was crucial in 2016 and remains a vital phrase for supporters. MAGA-based products sell exceptionally well as a way for Trump supporters to identify each other and show visible support.

KAG Products

After the 2016 election, when Trump emerged victoriously, "Keep America Great" or KAG, became another important slogan and catchphrase for Trump supporters. KAG related products are another area with a healthy market. Whether this is memorabilia such as hats, shirts, or household items like mugs, this is another promising market.

Of course, President Trump himself is central to this market. Any image with his name or likeness, particularly if it relates to the second term, is another strong market. A variety of different Trump products can be manufactured and sold to an enthusiastic market, including clothing and souvenirs for adults and products for younger family members, such as teddy bears.
