From split shift scheduling to social distancing within the office, Estess CPAs has continued to put safety and health as the topmost priorities for its clients, team members, and their families. As they continue to fully adhere to social distancing guidelines and keep their offices cleaned and sanitized following advice from the CDC, they also offer a free tax document pick-up service for clients aged over 65 who live within a 10-mile radius of either location. “From the beginning of this pandemic, we had a detailed plan to ensure that we could continue providing critical services,” said, John Estess, co-owner and CPA. “Both offices (7822 Highway 23, in Belle Chasse, LA and 128 Lakewood Drive, Luling, LA) have remained open”.

Relishing his role as an advocate, advisor, and partner to small business owners, Estess was among the first to inform small business owners of the different financial assistance options available to keep their businesses viable. “Many small businesses have suffered during this season of COVID-19. Although legislation at both the national and state levels has attempted to assist small businesses, many found the paperwork confusing. By closely monitoring the daily developments, we are able to provide timely information to clients and more specifically, to small business owners. It is and has always been our goal to be here to help small business owners navigate these uncertain times whether they are affected by the virus directly or through the volatility of the financial market,” he said.

Remaining at-the-ready to help review and discuss types of assistance and loans available and guide small business owners through the application process, the team at Estess CPAs has remained committed throughout these turbulent times. John’s wife and co-owner, Lori Estess, emphasized their firm’s commitment to clients, adding, “We understand the challenges of managing small, family-run businesses because we’re one too! We’re happy to lend our expertise and knowledge to help make your life manageable.”

While answering many business owners' questions, many have praised the patience, compassion, and willingness of the Estess team to help. “Estess CPAs continues to provide timely advice, and information to small business owners who needed, and still need, help navigating the information related to the Paycheck Protection Program \(PPP\) and other assistance programs,” said Becky Rolland, owner of Corbec Media.
