"I truly enjoy helping and mentoring people to be their best self," says Marvinna Thomas. "As a former nurse who values natural products, the cannabis plant has provided a surprising way to build successful businesses that help others heal and live a clean life without opioids."

As an entrepreneur and former registered nurse, helping people comes naturally to Thomas, the CEO of 420 Skin Care and 420 Medibles. She also served as the former director of community outreach for Women Grow, a national organization dedicated to inspiring cannabis entrepreneurs and as co-market leader of Women Grow Phoenix where Thomas helped many people get their first industry job through popular "Speed Hiring" events.

Thomas began 420 Skin Care after learning to make soaps. She blended CBD oil to make use of the cannabis plant's medicinal properties with specially sourced Egyptian ingredients known for preserving beauty. With the success of her healing CBD-infused product line of soaps, lotions, bath bombs, bath salts, hand sanitizer and body butter, Thomas ventured into edibles as another way to help others heal in more natural ways.

Thomas gives back to the community through Trinity Care Services and her 501(c)3 nonprofit Start Living Behavioral Health, a recovery home for men and women fighting opioid and/or alcohol addiction. A percentage of the profits from 420 Skin Care and 420 Medibles benefit Start Living with services and resources to reintroduce patients to clean living.
