There has been a noticeable change in customer preferences in the past few years and a sharp increase in online shopping. These factors are also driving the global food retail market. Rising population, government investment in improving the infrastructure and the entry of popular food giants from emerging economies are also boosting the industry. With the growing preference of consumers towards private label brands and the increasing supermarket or hypermarket shopping culture, the global market is expected to grow further in the coming years.

Supermarkets or hypermarkets are the largest sector of this industry and there has been a decline in the market share of specialist and independent retailers. As per reports, supermarkets or hypermarkets will continue to grow at an impressive rate over the forecast period. While the industry is facing some challenges due to threats from unorganized players and supply chain ineffectiveness, increasing online retail shopping and growing middle class population are expected to offset these challenges and help the global food retail industry grow further in the coming years.

Food Retailing Industry Segmentation:

The global food retail market is bifurcated into products and end-users.

On the basis of products, the market is divided into internet sales and store sales. Owing to the fast-paced and busy lifestyles on consumers, the internet sales segment has witnessed an impressive growth in the past few years. Consumers prefer ordering the products online for quick doorstep delivery.

On the basis of end-users, the market is divided into Ad, to ending consumers, and others.

Regional Analysis:

This report considers five main regions for analyzing the global food retail market. The regions are North America (The United States, Mexico and Canada), Europe (France, Italy, UK, Germany, Spain, Russia and rest of the region), Asia-Pacific (India, Japan, South Korea, Indonesia, China, Australia, Singapore, Vietnam and rest of the region), Central and South America (Brazil, Argentina, Columbia and rest of the region), and the Middle East and Africa (Egypt, UAE, Turkey, South Africa, Nigeria and Saudi Arabia).

North America dominates the global market, thanks to the presence of many key players in the region. Developed infrastructure, easy transportation, more employment and better income are also supporting market growth in North America. France, Germany, UK and Poland in the European region are expected to have the highest turnover during the forecast period. Asia-Pacific is also an important region in the global market. Growing awareness among consumers and increasing per capita income are the main factors fueling market growth.
