

NTLA to Conduct Live Webinar on COVID-19 & Commercial Real Estate

The educational session, the sixth of eight as part of the NTLA Pivot 2020 series, to cover the impacts of Coronavirus on commercial real estate

JUPITER, FL, USA, October 21, 2020

/EINPresswire.com/ -- For the first time since inception in 1997, the National Tax Lien Association (NTLA)—the #1 educator and only non-profit tax sale trade association—has launched a virtual educational series with timely webinar sessions this month. Topics have ranged from bankruptcy to local governments, and more.

With more and more businesses enacting ‘working from home permanently’ policies, what will be left of commercial space? This session will cover these very topics.”

Executive Director & NTLA
Foundation Founder*

This session on Coronavirus and commercial real estate, in particular, will show compelling data from office space in urban areas to big-box retail strip centers to multi-family rental buildings. Panelists will touch on each sector and give their take on how the market has been and will continue to be affected. The panelists are made up of thought leaders and subject matter experts in the commercial real estate arena: David Binswanger of Binswanger; Robert "Bobby" Miller of Millco Investments; Marc Rubin of CR&M Commercial Realty; and, Blake Johnson of CBRE.

“The whole world is watching the U.S. commercial real estate space and wondering, how bad is it and how long will the recovery take?” said Brad Westover, NTLA Executive Director. “We’re excited to shed light, albeit bleak, on the major repercussions upending some sectors, but not all, because of the pandemic.”

This live session will be held Thursday, October 22 from 2-3 pm ET. Current and prospective attendees will receive all eight sessions after October 29, the final day of the NTLA Pivot 2020 educational series.

“As we’ve heard day in and day out, the working landscape is changing and may never be the same,” continued Westover. “With more and more businesses enacting ‘working from home permanently’ policies, what will be left of commercial space? This session will cover these very topics.”
