

2nd Annual Cholangiocarcinoma Summit Kicks Off Tomorrow

The 2nd Annual Cholangiocarcinoma (CCA) Summit kicks off virtually on Thursday, October 22.

CRANBURY, NJ, USA, October 21, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Cranbury, NJ: The 2nd Annual Cholangiocarcinoma (CCA) Summit kicks off virtually on Thursday, October 22, chaired by Milind M. Javle, MD, Professor, MD Anderson Cancer Center, and Editor-in-Chief of CCA News. This invitation-only, highly interactive meeting provides a forum to discuss the most recent advances and understanding of CCA, an extremely rare form of bile duct cancer.

"We are thrilled to host the 2nd Annual CCA Summit," said Dr. Javle. "This year brings together even more leading researchers and thought leaders who will highlight the latest research in cholangiocarcinoma and gallbladder cancer."

The CCA Summit focuses on the epidemiology, pathology, translational/basic science, and clinical research impacting the management of patients with CCA. Viewpoints will be heard from medical and surgical oncologists, interventional radiologists, gastroenterologists, and pathologists regarding unmet needs in the treatment of patients with CCA, and the latest approaches to medical and surgical treatment options will be examined. In addition to a deep dive into CCA, gallbladder and biliary cancers will also be assessed.

"While the current circumstances require this meeting to be virtual rather than in New Orleans, we still have a record number of registrants and will make this a very successful event," Dr. Javle said.
