The reality is that a seasoned tax professional can find opportunities in the tax code and thus minimize the tax bite.

Here is the background on this release. The Pandemic has changed the business and income reality for nearly every business in San Francisco. This is even more true for persons or businesses whose business income has fluctuated during this difficult year. The Pandemic has dramatically impacted business revenues, consumer demand, hiring patterns, workplace procedures and many other aspects of international business. In addition, many San Francisco businesses that straddle more than one country face complex tax environments. According to the newly released content, the savvy business owner is seeking out tax advisors who understand the new environment and thus can take advantage of tax changes and thus minimize the tax bill.
