Overview

Global Oil and Gas Pipeline and Transportation Automation Market: About this market
The oil and gas pipeline and transportation automation market analysis considers sales from pipeline and LNG and terminal applications. Our study also finds the sales of oil and gas pipeline and transportation automation in APAC, Europe, MEA, North America, and South America. In 2019, the pipeline segment had a significant market share, and this trend is expected to continue over the forecast period. Factors such as high reliability and safe operations will play a significant role in the pipeline segment to maintain its market position. Also, our global oil and gas pipeline and transportation automation market report looks at factors such as expansion of oil terminals, benefits of pipelines over other modes of oil and gas transportation, and new exploration policies. However, increased use of alternative energy sources, technical challenges, and high cost associated with maintenance of pipeline and transportation infrastructure may hamper the growth of the oil and gas pipeline and transportation automation industry over the forecast period.

Oil terminals support the oil and gas supply chain by storing crude oil and petroleum products. Moreover, they serve as centers for oil and gas transportation. Globally, the rising energy demand has resulted in the increase in new oil terminal and pipeline constructions (including oil and gas pipeline and transportation automation), especially in APAC and Africa, where the continuous need for energy is demanding new oil and gas infrastructure. For instance, Saudi Aramco has already constructed the Muajjiz oil terminal with a holding capacity of 15 million barrels per day. This expansion of oil terminals will lead to the expansion of the global oil and gas pipeline and transportation automation market at a CAGR of over 4% during the forecast period.
