

Turnt Sequel Wraps Up Filming to Highlight Game-Changing Message about Gun Violence

The film is a partnership between rising star Torrei Hart and renowned producer Mann Robinson.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA, UNITED STATES, November 6, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Producers of the popular 2020 film, Turnt, are pleased to announce they have wrapped up filming of the movie's highly anticipated sequel, Super Turnt, in Atlanta, Georgia.

Super Turnt is a partnership between Torrei Hart and Mann Robinson – two notable and current figures in the movie production industry. The film focuses on its main character, Rilla, who is a highly feared street lord and rapper. Rilla has been released from prison and is faced with navigating changes in his immediate world, while dealing with dangers of the streets. Throughout the film, Rilla strives to make positive decisions that will benefit his family, but ultimately faces deadly violence that puts him on the wrong side of the law. Relying on his past mistakes and natural street smarts, Rilla outwits enemies who attempt to bring him down.

"Super Turnt is not your typical urban drama," says producer, writer, director, and star of the film, Mann Robinson. "Torrei and I really felt it was important to take on some tough topics in this sequel, particularly around gun violence. It's rare to see a film that truly depicts the challenges associated with gun violence and we are very proud of the work we've done to convey a truthful message."

Much to the delight of Turnt fans around the world, Super Turnt recently wrapped up production in October and is set to be released in 2021. The movie is a Sag film with no major financial backing, making it a truly independent film.
