

Bren Simon: The Environment Needs Philanthropy Too

Bren Simon is working to support causes aimed at meeting the environmental challenges facing our nation and world.

CARBONDALE, CO, UNITED STATES, November 10, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The following is adapted from a previous posting from Bren Simon regarding “going green” and meeting the environmental challenges facing our nation and world. As President-Elect Biden and Vice President-Elect Kamala Harris take on the issue of climate change and environmental stewardship, the theme of giving back to our environment is most relevant. From the Green New Deal to the Paris Climate Agreement – there is much to be discussed about how to best serve our environment and save our society.

Please visit BrenSimon.com for more information.

“

Reasons for living in an environmentally manner are much more important than wanting to enjoy a beautiful beach or thinking polar bears are cute...it is a matter of survival.”

Bren Simon

The act and idea of giving can be thought of in a variety of ways. You give a gift to someone when it is their birthday – or you may donate to their favorite cause. Being a giver in your community is different for different people. However, being a giver to the environment we all share is uniting. Developing a lifestyle of being environmentally conscious can be a gift not only to you and your neighbors, but also, for generations to come.

“Going green” seems to be everywhere – so why is it so important that we continue this trend? By investing in our future, we help to preserve the quality of life we enjoy today for years to come, and in some ways, even create an opportunity to improve it.

Making some small changes can create major benefits – and the reasons for living in an environmentally manner are much more important than wanting to enjoy a beautiful beach or thinking polar bears are cute...it is a matter of survival.

While individuals can make big differences in our own 'real estate', giving back to our environment is something where businesses can (and are obligated) to participate. For example, Google, Microsoft, and Disney (among many others) have all been named among top companies for the Corporate and Social Responsibility (CSR) programs ranging in topics from demonstrated leadership in community to innovative citizenship. CSR is not only a great opportunity to foster relationships among coworkers, but also familiarize communities with the good work of a company in their own neighborhood as they work in tandem to achieve a greener living space.

Some ways you can get started on living a greener life and giving back to your community in fresh new ways include:

Eat foods from locally to reduce the amount of fossil fuels used to transport the goods.

Volunteer for a cleanup or restoration project in your area.

Conserve energy with your thermostat (and save some money too.)

Interested in learning more about simple ways to make environmentally friendly changes in your life and around your home? Check out this list of 50 ideas to make a difference - <https://www.50waystohelp.com/> in your environment.

Dan Rene

kglobal

+1 2023298357

email us here

This press release can be viewed online at: <https://www.einpresswire.com/article/530415092>

EIN Presswire's priority is source transparency. We do not allow opaque clients, and our editors try to be careful about weeding out false and misleading content. As a user, if you see something we have missed, please do bring it to our attention. Your help is welcome. EIN Presswire, Everyone's Internet News Presswire™, tries to define some of the boundaries that are reasonable in today's world. Please see our Editorial Guidelines for more information.

© 1995-2020 IPD Group, Inc. All Right Reserved.