ventures, as determined by Red Herring's editorial team. Editors selected the finalists during a months-long process that takes into account criteria including disruptive impact, proof of concept, financial performance, market footprint, and quality of management.

The Top 100 North America designation, which was launched in 1996, has been awarded to up-and-coming companies that have since become industry benchmarks. Previous Top 100 finalists have included Alibaba, Facebook, Google, Skype, Spotify, Twitter, and YouTube.

“We were proud to have been selected by Red Herring as a finalist,” said Fraud.net Chief Executive Officer Whitney Anderson. “We have worked hard to deliver innovation and exceptional service to our clients as we scaled our product, and expanded our global footprint. It's rewarding to see those efforts recognized by some of the industry's top experts at an industry-leading publication.”

The Top 100 North America has become not only a springboard for some of tech's biggest names, but a valued and trusted tool for venture capitalists, experts, and analysts as well.

“Selecting finalists for this year’s Top 100 has proved more difficult than ever,” said Alex Vieux, publisher and chairman of Red Herring. “North America has been tech’s beating heart for years—but never have I seen such an exciting, disruptive, and innovative generation as we have in 2020. Fraud.net fully deserves its place among our finalists, and I’ve every confidence it will make a significant impact in the tech world.”

Finalists will have the opportunity to present their winning strategies at the Red Herring Top 100 North America conference on Nov 17-18, 2020. The Top 100 winners will be announced after all the presentations at the Top 100 Forum.
