

Scientists@Home: Being Industrious and Setting and Accomplishing Targets

During the pandemic, these Scientists are making the most of their time at home.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, November 19, 2020
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Ron has the blueprint for getting through these difficult times.

He's flourishing and prospering. With that lesson from The Way to Happiness as his foundation, Ron has taken on the challenge of building himself an impressive new house. And before too long, that place that's now covered in steel rebar and cement will be Ron's home sweet home.

Caroline is growing a flourishing garden in her backyard.

Every night, she gets to go and pick some fresh produce for dinner. From bountiful Brussels sprouts to blue-ribbon blueberries, Caroline has an assortment of healthy foods to choose from. She is indeed an impressive example of following the "Be Industrious" precept from The Way to Happiness.

Des collects salvaged wood and, in his home workshop, transforms it into beautiful pieces of custom furniture.

Right from her garden to her table with the freshest fruits and vegetables anywhere.

Ron is building for the future.

Just as he makes the best use of materials, Des is making the most of his time by staying productive.

All three of these Scientologists are using the principles they have learned from the books of L. Ron Hubbard to flourish and prosper in these challenging times.
