Truck accident in Brownsville, Texas “Trucking accidents are the nightmare scenario for many individual drivers,” explained attorney Javier Villarreal, a managing partner at the Villarreal law firm. “The size differential between a car and a truck, however isn’t just about weight. Most trucking companies have large insurance policies and those insurers fight tooth-and-nail to defend their client’s interests against those who suffer injuries in a trucking accident.”

The newly updated information page can be found at <https://jvlawfirm.net/practice-areas/trucking-accidents/>. There, the consumer can educate him or herself about trucking accidents. They can also take the first steps towards potentially engaging an attorney to represent their interests. It should be noted that the firm has bolstered their content on trucking accidents over recent months and weeks by creating many laser-focused posts on specific trucking accident needs. For example, a new post can be found at <https://jvlawfirm.net/if-you-have-been-in-a-truck-wreck-you-need-the-services-of-a-specialist-attorney/>. The post explains that, first, truck wrecks happen all the time in Cameron County. Since the city is “on the border between Texas and Mexico,” it has a lot of truck traffic coming into and leaving the United States. Mexico is a huge trading partner not just for Texas but for all of North America, and it takes a lot of trucks going both ways. If a person has been in a truck wreck, then that person deserves aggressive lawyer representation, one that “knows trucks”.

As a truck wreck lawyer in Cameron County, Javier Villarreal aims to be the best attorney he can be one client at a time. The law firm specializes in personal injury claims for accidents of all types – slip and fall, car wrecks, animal attacks, boat accidents, construction accidents, and more – but above all, truck wrecks.

The problem with a truck wreck in Texas is that trucks are just so big and heavy. They can cause a massive amount of damage.
