future. The one hour virtual discussion premieres 3pm Friday, November 20th, moderated by author Matt Taibbi of Rolling Stone and features leading experts across the U.S. The event is free and open to the public who register on www.eventbrite.com/e/student-loan-debt-crisis-town-hall-tickets-128447629317

Filmmaker Michael J. Camoin presents scenes from his upcoming documentary SCARED TO DEBT: America's Student Loan Scam while Taibbi invites panelists such as presidents this could have legal complications. Catherine Austin Fitts, former Sallie Mae board member (1991-93) wonders why students are still taking out loans given the removal of consumer protections by Congress in 1998 (Clinton) and 2005 (Bush). Camoin's documentary will cover the demise of the Department of Education now fraught with ineptness, corruption and booking billions in profit on student loans in default. The student loan debt town hall is a virtual march on Washington hosted by author, Paul Grondahl, director of New York State Writers Institute.

Additional bios for each panelist can be found at the link above, where the premiere will drop 3pm November 20th and run for 6 weeks through January 2nd. Viewers will be able to follow-up with panelists, become an ambassador for the documentary and learn how to get engage in transforming an otherwise federal predatory lending scheme.
