“The lessons being applied in the curriculum is what I have created in my B.O.S.S. eBay Class,” says Hall. “Children are proving they are far more technologically advanced than we were at their age so it was no surprise that when I offered the class on August 31, within minutes about 60 students enrolled.” The revenue earned from selling on eBay the students will reinvest and open their Amazon store in 2021.

Hall says the pandemic has shown many that they must create additional streams of income and look into home-based businesses. Having earned over a million dollars selling through online platforms such as Amazon and eBay, Hall has been featured on multiple outlets including CBS & ABC for her earnings and ability to teach others how to “BOSS UP”.

“We are delighted to have found the BOSS CLASS LLC's eBay course that aligns with our curriculum expectations that will bring awareness and exposure into entrepreneurship, problem-solving, and critical thinking,” said Iris Blevins of Genesis Preparatory Academy.

While this is Hall's first in-person class taught at a school in Georgia, her award-winning bestselling books on mental health chronicling her life as the daughter of a violent bipolar schizophrenic have been on the curriculums of several schools as reading material. She is also a philanthropist known for her hurricane relief efforts and supplying students in the US Virgin Islands with the laptops needed to get back to school online amidst the COVID19 pandemic.
