It adds a unique dynamic as Sheldon gets the chance to host the mixtape as an alter ego. The mixtape features Paper Chase, Roc C, Tha Rift, L.E.M, and a presidential special appearance. Shel is known for putting his heart into every track and "Carolina Blue Dream" is no different. The lead track "Quarantine Flow" is a response to his former college basketball coach, Gregg Marshall who was under fire for misconduct and forced to resign. Shel was at the media forefront of players pushing back against the career abusive coach. "Quarantine Flow" speaks to that, the NCAA, and other issues in the world on a great track produced by Cassius Clay(Rich the Kid).

About Sheldon "Big Shel" Bailey

Shel Bailey, originally born in Germany was raised for most of his formidable years in North Carolina, which his father hails from. Growing up as a kid in Fayetteville, North Carolina, Big Shel Bailey had dreams to play for the UNC Tarheels and one day be a multidimensional star like his childhood idol, Shaq. He found confidence through theatrical performance and excelled in drama. When he wasn't performing, he would write down any lyrics he would think of. He cultivated his talent and pursued his dreams from home to SC, Miami, NY, and now resides in Los Angeles, CA. He is consistently working in Hollywood and show business while being the father to 3 amazing children. The successful Carolina to California connection is "Carolina Blue Dream".
