the Singapore FinTech Festival (SFF) 2020

David Ye, co-founder, chairman and CEO of Rong360 | Jianpu Technology, said, "Our endeavor to lead the way in FinTech in China means many things, including not only innovation on one hand, but global communication with industry players and regulators on the other. As the world economy is now rocked by both crisis and opportunity, the moment to participate responsibly and with empathy is here. We hope to showcase China's advancements in the FinTech sphere and to exchange ideas on how to do things better. More than ever, consumers and businesses are exploring new ways to apply technology to Finance, and regulators in FinTech hubs like Singapore have never been more open to working with innovators to make the balance happen. This is set to be a crucial event to close off a challenging year – but more importantly, one that sets the tone for the FinTech industry on the uncertainties and opportunities present as we move into 2021."

Sopnendu Mohanty, Chief FinTech Officer of MAS said, "The rise of FinTech in China has seen the emergence of innovative FinTechs and unicorns, and growing research capabilities driving the development of technologies like 5G. As one of the leading FinTech hubs in the world, China continues to innovate in areas including mobile payments, as it moves towards becoming an almost cashless society. Through the World FinTech Festival in Beijing, we look forward to connecting the Chinese FinTech community to the world at SFF to facilitate learning opportunities for greater FinTech innovation."
