Executive Summary

Global Fiberglass Pipes Market is valued approximately USD 3.7 billion in 2019 and is anticipated to grow with a healthy growth rate of more than 5.22 % over the forecast period 2020-2027. Fiberglass pipes are the composite materials having combining properties of two or more materials such as glass fibers and resins. These pipes have characteristic properties such as high strength and durability and steady performances in extreme temperatures. Fiberglass pipes are composite items that are bound with thermosetting resin made from glass fibre reinforcements. Fiberglass pipes typically have superior strength, tensile strength, practically inert, low density, and high longevity as opposed to traditional pipes. Fiberglass pipes provide better mechanical properties as well, resulting in an improved shelf life of the component. In the pharmaceutical, irrigation, and oil & gas industries, fibreglass pipes are primarily used, as they are exposed to various dynamic environments during the transport of natural gas and water supply. The market is driven by Increased oil & gas development and exploration, increasing demand for fiberglass pipes in sewage and water management. For instance, According to the National Association of Corrosion Engineers (NACE International), the direct cost of corrosion was estimated at about US$ 67 billion worldwide in 2014, including in the chemical industry. Therefore, without disrupting current activities, most businesses are likely to take the replacement option for aged pipe lines. The key players of global Fiberglass pipes market have adopted various strategies to gain competitive advantage including product launch, mergers and acquisition, partnerships and agreements, investment, funding and others. For instance, In January 2018, Advanced Industrial Technologies announced an agreement to acquire FCX Results, Inc., a distributor of engineered valves, instruments, pumps and lifecycle services. The acquisition will assist businesses to improve their position as leading industrial distributors.
