Palo Alto, CA – February 22, 2021 – The Radicati Group releases “Email Statistics Report, 2021-2025” a new market study which provides data and key statistics on business and consumer adoption of Email and Mobile Email. The study includes data on the number of business and consumer users and accounts, user demographics, four-year forecasts for on-premises and cloud email accounts, breakouts by business size, vertical industry, email traffic volumes, average number of daily emails sent and received per user, email storage data, and more.

According to the report, the number of worldwide email users, including both business and consumer users, will grow from over 4.1 billion in 2021 to nearly 4.6 billion by 2025. Email use continues to see strong growth with both consumer and business users, as it is an integral part of the overall Internet experience and an email account (i.e. email address) is required to sign up to any kind online activity, including social networking sites, instant messaging and any other form of online presence.
