Ryan is known for Piranha 3D, The Wrestler, The Dark Knight, Balls of Fury, Bruce Almighty, Austin Powers in Gold member, Spider-Man, Little Nicky and many more.

The concept of Bloody Bobby came to Ryan while attending a Halloween party. Ryan started a website in 2011 to create the Urban Legend of "Bloody Bobby". At the time, Ryan was unsure as to what Bloody Bobby would look like. But soon after starting the website, people started to send in pictures of Bloody Bobby sightings! He knew exactly what Bloody Bobby should look like. In 2014 Ryan started to film Bloody Bobby.

The sequel, Black Pumpkin filmed in 2018. Each of the characters in Black Pumpkin had a special meaning in the story. There are references all thru Black Pumpkin for Horror fans. "Elliot" who is played by Dogen Eyeler, came from a character in E.T., Jacques Derosena played "Mr. Carpenter" for John Carpenter and Grayson Thorne Kilpatrick who played Lawrence "Pork Chop" Chubbs is a reference from The Goonies as "Lawrence". Ryan wanted to reference 80's style horror and sci-fi films.

One major idea that Ryan used in Black Pumpkin was from Halloween III: Season of the Witch. There is a reference to a parody commercial that is played in the movie and you can see "Pork Chop's" character dressed up as "Happy Halloween Fun" on their Trick or Treat night. So watch for that commercial and "Pork Chop".

Actor Curt Clendenin has returned for the sequel playing "Reggie's" twin brother "Alex" as well as David Uchansky who reprised his role as "Mr. Leavitt" the Sheriff of Fall Creek Valley.

The person who played "Bloody Bobby" is the veteran actress Jo Osmond. She is known for her roles in Dumbo, Doctor Who, The Huntsman: Winter War, Snow White and the Huntsman, Harry Potter and The Goblet of Fire and Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone.
