

The Electoral College - In The Spotlight Once Again

Why is the United States the only country that uses the system known as the Electoral College to choose its national leaders?

TUCSON, AZ, US, December 15, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- On December 14th the electors from the Electoral College will have gathered in their states to cast votes individually and on paper ballots for president and vice president. Now you can see and hear the Whys, Whys and Whys of America's most Contentious College from its inception along with the controversies it has stirred up throughout the years.

In the recently released documentary, "Vote HERE: A Film for the People by the People" you'll find out how many times the Popular Vote in U.S.

Presidential elections was supplanted

by the Electoral Vote resulting in the inauguration of a presidential candidate that did not reflect the will of the majority of voters. Or how the winner-take-all system employed by all but the states of Nebraska and Maine was never the intention of the Founding Fathers.

So why has such an institution never come under the scrutiny of Congress who has the power to amend and abolish legislation that does not accurately reflect the popular will of the people? Oh but it has according to American historian at Harvard and renowned author, Prof. Alex Keyssar, "The Electoral College has been the subject of more attempts at constitutional amendments than any other subject in U.S. history."

Keyssar along with other notable historians and participants elaborate not only on the Electoral
