

Greg Vigna, Doctor-Lawyer: Comments on the failures of Penumbra Inc. Jet 7

The Vigna Law Group comments on the failures of Penumbra Inc. Jet 7.

SANTA BARBARA , CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, December 30, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- "Penumbra Inc. made a mistake in the design of its catheter, and like many other pharmaceutical companies compounded it by not recalling the device from the market." - Greg Vigna, MD, JD, stroke expert, national pharmaceutical injury lawyer

"We have seen this before in the IVC filter litigation when companies keep defective devices on the market as they try and make design changes in the device to avoid scrutiny by the FDA and hide the product design flaws from physicians and patients." - Ben Martin, national pharmaceutical lawyer, co-lead counsel Cook and Argon IVC filter litigation.

"Law firms are jumping into the Penumbra litigation with no intention of litigating these cases. Patients who have suffered a stroke and complications of a medical device that have robbed them of the chance of neurological recovery by a Penumbra product must be marched to the courthouse" - Greg Vigna, MD, JD Stroke Expert, Board Certified Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation.

Why choose the Vigna Law Group?

- 1) Unlike other law firms, we are both pharmaceutical injury attorneys and malpractice attorneys and we litigate failure to diagnose stroke. Malpractice cases like the Penumbra Inc. Jet 7 cases require us to prove that the brain at risk of permanent injury during a stroke, which is referred to as the penumbra, could have been saved with a successful thrombectomy (removal of the clot).
- 2) Dr. Greg Vigna has been a stroke expert for over two decades and as a Board Certified Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation physician is a testifying expert in Life Care Planning, and is a national neurological injury attorney. His firm is individually litigating these neurological injury cases in the vaginal mesh litigation.
- 3) Ben Martin, Esq., is a national pharmaceutical injury attorney who is a personal injury
