

Google's Global Diversity and Inclusion Lead to Keynote National Faith@Work Conference

Tomas Flier, Google's Global Diversity and Inclusion Lead, will keynote the 2nd National Faith@Work ERG Conference, Feb. 9, 2021.

WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, UNITED STATES, January 6, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Global Diversity and Inclusion Lead, will deliver a keynote presentation at the 2nd annual National Faith@Work ERG Conference, Feb. 9-11, 2021 hosted by the Religious Freedom & Business Foundation (RFBF) and the Busch School of Business at The Catholic University of America in Washington, DC.

In Flier's keynote, he will tell the story of how -- at Google -- building a culture of belonging for all includes religious inclusion.

"We are excited to hear from Mr. Flier how religious inclusion benefits not only Google's global workforce but also all of us who rely on the many innovative products and services provided by Google every day," said Brian Grim, RFBF President.

Connection to one another and to our wider communities is an essential part of our wellbeing, and technology can help bring us together.”

Kirk Perry, Pres., Global Client & Agency, Exec Sponsor, Google IBN

At Google there are currently 16 Employee Resource Groups (ERGs) with more than 250 chapters globally – providing community, personal and professional development opportunities for Googlers from underrepresented communities. Google's Inter Belief Network (IBN) aims to create a culture of inclusion, tolerance, and mutual understanding at Google for a diversity of beliefs, where Googlers of all beliefs feel
