Foundation, the UK's leading charity for everyone's mental health. Baking is considered an act of mindfulness and many have spoken out about its benefits, including 2012 Great British Bake-Off winner, John Whaite who openly spoke about it helping him deal with manic depression.

The initiative is part of the company's purpose to help promote the physical and mental health benefits that baking provides and as of the 1st of January 2021, 10% of profits from all baking boxes will be ringfenced to support mindful baking projects that make a direct impact in the community. It has also committed to publishing an annual impact and financial report on its website which will cover and other donations and initiatives the busines currently supports. Britain Loves Baking's founder, Greg Wixted said: One in four people will experience an issue with their mental health at some point in their life and the ongoing pandemic has compounded this. I am one of those four, for years I have turned to baking and can be found baking late into the night when I am stressed"

He continues "Our entire business was founded on the principle of doing the right thing and now, more than ever, people are finding things hard and our industry is in a privileged position to lead this initiative. I encourage others in our industry to do the same, this really is about supporting the nation and our customers by putting people before profits and shareholders.

Baking can be so relaxing, and we have kept the recipes simple so that people can focus on the baking itself. The boxes include Focused Focaccia, Meditation Cupcakes and Raising Your Self Esteem Polenta & Sesame loaf. All ingredients are supplied ready-measured out, with a step-by-step recipe card and full instructions and video tutorials on Facebook and You Tube. Each week during lockdown Wixted and his team will randomly gift up to 20 boxes and anyone can nominate someone or themselves via the contact section or purchase a box on the www.birtainlovesbaking.com website.
