GLOBAL, January 19, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Heavy demand for new construction, rising usage in residential application along with declining LED prices will strengthen Asia's position.

Rising Government Interventions: Governments around the world have passed measures to phase out incandescent light bulbs for general lighting in favor of more energy-efficient lighting alternatives. Moreover, engagement by the governments of developed economies (UK & US) and emerging economies (India & China) in the promotion of LED lighting products by providing the tax incentives and subsidies for these products are fuelling the market growth.

Dramatic Cost Reduction: LED manufacturers have come up with new and cost-effective technologies. The prices of LED fell from $12.4 in 2014 to $5.1 in 2019.

The steep decline in the price of LED light sources is primarily attributed to the increased supply in 2017 and competition among brands to gain market share. In countries like China and India, the demand for LED has gone up manifold since 2014 while the prices have reduced by a third.

Technological Advancements: Products having technologies such as motion sensors, IOT technology, control options through mobile applications, smart lighting has driven the market growth. Cities across the globe have installed smart streetlights, built on an IoT backbone, which are useful in traffic monitoring, crime detection, and sensing environmental issues.

Moreover, use of Light Fidelity (Li-Fi) for transmitting data over light wave has reduced the burden on the existing radio networks by offering last-mile connectivity to congested areas.

Rising Awareness: Rising consumer awareness about cost-effectiveness and eco-friendliness of LED lights has driven the volume sales from the residential and well as the commercial sectors. Residential lighting segment has witnessed high growth due to the adoption of LED A-type lamps but commercial application continues to lead the market applications.
