"Being recognized by such a well-respected publication as the Financial Times is a true honor. To be named alongside other growth-minded companies on their inaugural list, especially in a challenging year for businesses due to the COVID-19 pandemic, is a proud achievement for our company, team, and the clients whom we serve every day," said Concierge Auctions CEO Laura Brady.

The Americas' Fastest Growing Companies list by the Financial Times includes the top 500 companies, among millions in the Americas, that have achieved the highest growth in revenues between 2015 and 2018 (ranked by compound annual growth rate).

Concierge Auctions ranked No. 17 in its category, joining the likes of other notable brands such as Tesla, Netflix, Paypal, Bombas, and more.

"While the world's gone digital, we've been digital. Our world-class platform offers buyers an immersive experience, and I attribute a significant amount of our growth to our focus on being tech-forward in a more traditional industry. Since 2010, we have given buyers the ability to name their price through our online bidding technology, from anywhere in the world," said Concierge Auctions Chairman Chad Roffers.
