JustFly and FlightHub on Ways to Disinfect After Travel

MONTREAL, QUEBEC, CANADA, January 22, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As the world awaits the passing of the current pandemic, air, sea and land travel have been greatly reduced. Whether in an accommodation, on a flight, a ship or a car, taking health and safety precautions to keep germs at bay is important.

However, travelers often forget to take similar measures to maintain cleanliness after a trip.

Disinfect your devices

FlightHub and JustFly offer tips on how and what to disinfect after returning from travel.

What to Disinfect After Travel

According to the University of Washington in Seattle, "The most important thing to clean after a trip is your hands." More specifically, washing hands at least once after leaving the aircraft and again at home. Travelers often touch door handles, luggage, counters, car seats and several other surfaces that may have lingering germs while in transit. This makes washing and sanitizing hands particularly important.

Unpacking

For travelers returning home in the current climate, unpacking may be of a slightly higher concern than usual. While this is a normal reaction, the solution is simple; disinfect. Travelers should take a few minutes to carefully wipe down and clean any item they've touched on a recurring basis.

Be certain to clean any and all of the following objects and surfaces:

ID cards

Passports

Wallets

Passport holders

Mobile devices

Keys

Glasses

Luggage (especially handles)

Door knobs

Any other object that were brought during travel

All clothes should also be washed, including outdoor clothing like coats as well as accessories like hats or scarves.

Ways to Disinfect

Many travelers may want to take disinfecting a step further by disinfecting their homes. Of course, using standard cleaning solutions is always a simple and effective choice. That said, many products often contain chemicals and have strong, overpowering fragrances. Luckily, there are several natural alternatives, many of which can be combined to create your own effective cleanser.

FlightHub and JustFly have compiled a list of traditional and organic disinfectants below:

Soap and water

Vinegar

Hydrogen Peroxide

Essential Oils such as Tea Tree, Lemon or Rosemary

Bleach

Baking soda

Disinfecting sprays and wipes (available in organic ingredients)

With health being a major concern for many travelers, taking the appropriate steps to disinfect and stay clean during and after travel is necessary.

As germs are often present in one form or the next, this should become a post-travel routine for all travelers long after the world regains a sense of normalcy.
