Houston-based activists Jacquelyn Aluotto & Dr. James Dixon, founders of the NTZ “No Trafficking Zone” initiative, announced the first annual NTZ Impact Week. NTZ launched in January 2020, against the backdrop of one of the largest human trafficking hubs in the nation. Harris County Sports and Convention Corporation, Inc. The Impact Week will educate, enlist and engage corporations, sports and entertainment venues, colleges and universities, school districts, religious entities, municipalities, and states in a coordinated fight against the spread of sex and human trafficking in all forms. A series of panel presentations, speakers, educational discussions, purposed to enlighten the public and equip collaborative partners in the work to combat the scourge of trafficking have been enlisted.

The NTZ Impact Week will feature notable guests and speakers including: Conchita Sarnoff, best known for breaking open the Jeffrey Epstein case. Farrah Zulaikha, U.N. Ambassador and humanitarian. Bun B, a leading socially conscious entertainer.

Survivor leaders, advocacy organization leaders, law enforcement specialists, elected officials, faith leaders, professional sports figures, and strategic collaborators.

Within the events, an awards luncheon will recognize the impact of County Judge Lina Hidalgo, Mayor Sylvester Turner, Commissioner Rodney Ellis, Commissioner R. Jack Cagle, Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee, Congressman Mike McCaul, State Senator Larry Taylor, State Rep. Shawn Their, Judge Bonnie Hellums, and others.
