DURHAM, NC, UNITED STATES, February 2, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- After much consideration, IASA reschedules their annual in-person conference to August 29 - September 1, 2021. "We are still experiencing the effects of the pandemic, and although we can now see light at the end of the tunnel, we are mindful of our attendees and want to take every precaution to keep them safe as much as possible. Moving the conference later in the year, affords us a stronger opportunity for a safe, in-person event. We know that our community desperately wants to be together, and we are strongly optimistic this can happen in August." said IASA CEO Kerry Crockett.

IASA has been communicating closely with the New Orleans Convention and Visitors Bureau regarding the city's phased reopening plan and new safety protocols for all tourists and in-person events. The IASA Xchange and OnPOINT events will be held at New Orleans' Ernest N. Morial Convention Center, just a quick walk from the infamous French Quarter, unique Creole cuisine, jazz clubs, museums, and historical landmarks.

"Our event may look a little different with a smaller, more personal footprint, but still promises to offer all the latest in insurance education and networking opportunities our community has come to love. This event will be a hybrid (in-person and online), so those who cannot join us in-person, as well as our broader insurance community, can attend via a live streaming option. We want everyone to be able to join us based on their comfort level. In addition to our standard offering, we will work with the city of New Orleans to create a community service event to show our support and appreciation. We have an amazing group of volunteers that are excited to show New Orleans some love." said Crockett.
