Since the start of the pandemic the not-for-profit 501(c)(3) organization has provided more than five million units of PPE to protect healthcare and frontline workers as well as vulnerable communities throughout the U.S. Now, these services will be available to all U.S. based individual buyers.

"At this point in the pandemic, it's important for everyone to have the quality PPE they need to stay safe. Our mission is to open up access to vetted PPE from verified suppliers," explained Anne Miller, the organization's executive director. "That is why, in addition to continuing to serve healthcare workers, we have opened up access to the Project N95 Shop."
