

"Universal Dividend," A Song By Krunchie Killeen, Released On Spotify

Krunchie Killeen Releases On Spotify (And Other Digital Channels) "The Universal Dividend," A Song Calling For A Monthly Payment To All Adults

DUBLIN, DUBLIN 11, IRELAND, February 14, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Krunchie Killeen has released "The Universal Dividend," a song calling for the introduction of a monthly payment to all adults across the world. This would ensure that all humans get to share in the wealth of the world. A person would not have to be unemployed to claim this dividend: (s)he would be entitled just by being an adult member of the human race. The song is available (from 15 February 2021) on Spotify, Apple Music, Deezer, Amazon Music, Amazing Radio, and other digital channels.

The feasibility of such a payment becomes credible now that President Biden has announced a payment to every household in the USA.

A person would not have to be unemployed to claim this dividend: (s)he would be entitled just by being an adult member of the human race”

Krunchie Killeen

A Universal Dividend, (also called Universal Basic Income), has previously been called for by Martin Luther King Jnr, Economist Milton Friedman (“negative income tax”), Andrew Yang (author of “The War On Normal People”), Kevin B Greene, Yanis Varoufakis, and others.

The cost of administering such a payment would be low, since it would involve no scrutiny, except proof of identity, and, therefore, unlike Unemployment Assistance, require no elaborate bureaucracy. A person would be credited with the dividend simply by registering and having some biological identifier recorded (fingerprint, photo, iris image, or whatever is suitable per current technology).

One nation already has a universal dividend for its members: the Seminole Indians of Florida: see <https://krunchiekilleen.blogspot.com/p/seminole-indians-of-florida.html>

Most of the advocates of a Universal Dividend envisage national implementation. Krunchie, however, calls for a Universal Dividend supervised by the United Nations. He suggests that the funding of the United Nations in future be by a universal wealth tax (of, perhaps 1% of the wealth of individuals whose net worth is more than $10 M) to cover both the administration of the United Nations, the Universal Dividend, and the other UN programs.

Because the Universal Dividend would stimulate the world economy, as well as reducing economic migration and other endemic problems, it would actually lead to an increase in world wealth.

The words of Krunchie' poem are:

Let's make a new path for all the nations

Based on the worldwide brotherhood of man,

Paying a universal dividend

To every person in every land,

Removing poverty and destitution,

Building a world based on trust and peace.

Let us renew the United Nations

To care for every race and creed.

Let us stand for human values;
Let us stand for the Rights of Man;
No more armies, no more slaughters,
Nor more leaders' bloodstained hands.

For this song, Krunchie adopts the air of a martial song in Irish written by Ireland's first President, Douglas Hyde (1860 - 1949).
