What people are saying...

"This episode of The Sanford Hall Report on International Cyber Policy is of paramount importance, as cybersecurity challenges can cripple a company." — Peter Lambert, Senior Vice President, Willis Towers Watson- M&A Group

"As part of Industry 4.0, Internet of Things (IoT) will redefine the transatlantic economic ties. Recent major cyber-incidents reconfirmed the global nature of cyber-threats and the need for closer transatlantic cooperation to improve security standards along supply chains. The Sanford & Hall Report offers an excellent opportunity to address these issues." — Dr. Lucian Cernat, Head of Global Regulatory Cooperation and International Procurement Negotiations, European Commission

"Cyber policy requires a global perspective. Businesses, no matter how large and skilled, simply cannot adequately respond to today's cyber threats without support from the government - theirs and others around the world. This is the perfect time to start looking at how governments are responding to this 21st-century challenge to see what is working and what is not." — Russell Harrison, Director of Government Relations, IEEE-USA

"We are fortunate to have real-world leaders helping the private sector with economic recovery through The Sanford & Hall Report. They are helping us take some control of the dynamics of change during this global pandemic crisis." — Cristian Edwards, Partner, Puga Ortiz Abogados

"The Sanford & Hall Report is extremely valuable, as it brings together a diverse panel of experts from all around the world to discuss critical topics like data protection, hybrid workforce solutions, and international cyber policy." — Aanchal Gupta, Vice President of Azure Security, Microsoft

"This episode of The Sanford & Hall Report is a must view, as it discusses how in the COVID-19 era, governments, critical infrastructures, enterprises, and private citizens must strive to maintain an ongoing balance between business continuity and cybersecurity." — Esti Peshin, Vice President and General Manager of the Cyber Division, Israel Aerospace Industries

"Developing balanced international cyber policy is critical for global and U.S. security and commerce. The forum will facilitate a cutting-edge discussion of these issues. It will lead to a consideration of other important regulatory and enforcement issues in fields related to international cyber policy that The Sanford & Hall Report will consider." — Bruce Zagaris, Partner, Berliner Corcoran & Rowe LLP
