Sited on one of the finest 100-acre parcels in Colorado and backing up to millions of acres of national forest, the estate offers panoramic views of Mt. Sopris and unspoiled natural beauty.

Scott Kirk, President of Interluxe, feels that this home's privacy, exceptional amenities, and breathtaking views make this one of the area's rarest offerings. "A property that offers this level of privacy and amenities, both indoor and outdoor, makes it truly unique. Those who want to own generous a scenic slice of the gorgeous Colorado mountains won't want to miss this outstanding opportunity."

After partnering with Interluxe for many auctions in the past, Ted Steers and Gil Fancher of Vail Real Estate Center decided to team up again for another successful sale. They chose to work with Interluxe after being involved in previous successful sales utilizing the platform and because of their 20 years of history of selling luxury homes in the Vail Valley. "They have produced a lot of happy sellers and buyers in Colorado and elsewhere, and that's what I want for our clients. We're excited to partner with them again." said Ted Steers of Vail Real Estate Center.

Despite the current conditions of the COVID-19 world, online auctions mean luxury transactions can carry on as usual. "Since our inception, Interluxe has centered our model on offering clients a streamlined and virtual approach to buying and selling luxury property" said Scott Kirk, Interluxe President. "Tour in-person or virtually and all bidding takes place online. With all inspections and due diligence provided in advance of the sale, there's no better or safer way to buy."
