

Difficult Conversations: New Advice Chaser Webinar Discusses How to Plan Finances with Aging Parents

Join this Advice Chaser webinar to learn strategies on how to make important financial decisions and have difficult conversations with your aging parents.

NEW YORK CITY, NY, USA, March 11, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Finances tend to be an emotionally charged topic of discussion--and that's especially true when it comes to talking about money with your aging parents. They may be in denial about the reality of old age. But with each day that passes, your parents get older, and the reality is that increased age usually comes with increased medical bills. On March 6, at 12:00 noon Eastern time, Advice Chaser will host a webinar titled "Difficult Discussions with your Aging Parents: There's No Time Like the Present." Advice Chaser Offers Consumers an Easy Way to Find the Best Professional Financial Advisor

Advice Chaser, a service that introduces clients to experienced financial advisors, will host the webinar. The webinar's main speaker will be Annalee Kruger, a longtime advocate for caregivers and seniors. Her expertise spans more than 25 years of being a social worker for elderly citizens, being an executive director of healthcare facilities, and owning her own company, Care Right, Inc. Her company specializes in creating aging plans so that families have proper financial planning to care for elderly loved ones. She will be sharing strategies on how to make important financial decisions with your aging parents. In the webinar, she will cover:

- >>What to include in an aging plan
- >>What kinds of health considerations could impact finances
- >>Options for private and government financial assistance when your parents retire
- >>How to approach difficult topics such as funeral plans, end-of-life directives, and Do Not
