

The RemoteRated CEO List: Who Are the Top Leaders in Remote Work?

Remote leadership requires skills, perspective, & strategies not obvious to 'traditional' CEOs. We polled & researched to identify which CEOs excel.

SAN FRANCISCO, CA, USA, March 17, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The leadership and development of a remote organization requires skills, perspective, and strategies that might not be obvious to 'traditional' CEOs. We polled communities and researched for ourselves to identify which CEOs are truly excelling in leading their company, culture, and people in a remote world.

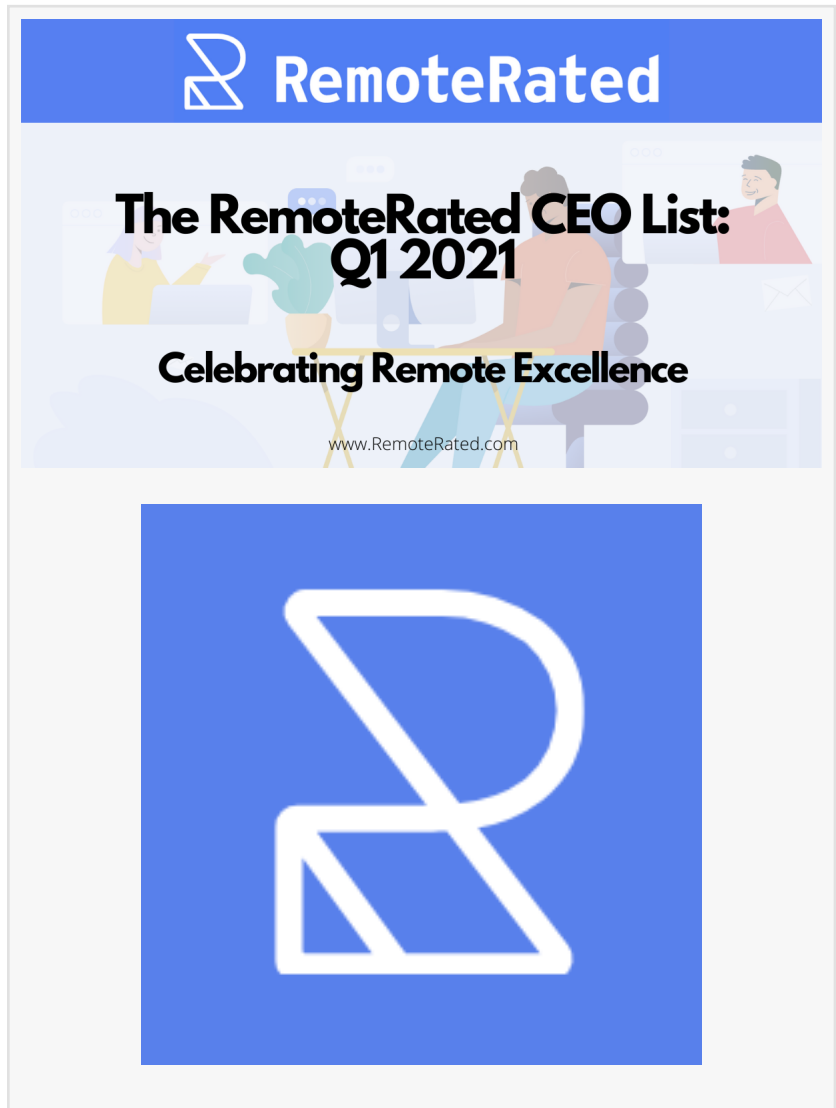

Factors we considered:

Communication: We gave strong consideration to CEOs with articulate public leadership with regard to the remote conversation. CEOs that are evangelizing best practices, employee empowerment, and remote transformation immediately became candidates.

Employee Endorsement: Has the CEO received praise, and positive testimonial online? (We chatted with employees, dug up articles, Tweets, Glassdoor mentions, etc.)

Company Growth: Has the company been innovating, expanding, hiring, and growing revenue throughout the madness of the pandemic? (An achievement unto itself!)

Products / Services: We gave consideration to CEOs leading companies that provide value, utility, or leadership to the remote world. Although this was a minimal criteria, and you'll find that some company's products on the list have almost nothing to do with remote work. That being said, we wanted to celebrate those CEOs that are proactively building companies that themselves are evolving remote work.

Who did we miss? Who else deserves recognition? Set them up on RemoteRated.com or send us a note to nominate them for our next list!
