

Tampa Bay Tech's Software CEO Council kicks off year with roundtable and commitment to local charity

TAMPA, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, March 19, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Last month, Tampa Bay Tech's Software CEO Council (TBSC) met to discuss the ongoing issues so many CEOs are experiencing, including the safe return to work-spaces and the challenges of continuing to attract, recruit and retain top tech talent.

Hosted by Tampa Bay Tech, TBSC meets quarterly to discuss business challenges in a confidential, CEO-only environment. In their last virtual gathering the group discussed regional challenges and talked about ideas to attract more skilled talent to the area. They also discussed benefits of, and ways to, raise awareness of the concentration of cyber technology and IT integrators in our region. An integral part of the group's charter is an annual commitment to support a local charity, and at this meeting Computer Mentors was selected.

Tampa Bay Tech Executive Director, Jill St. Thomas

The commitment of these leaders to lean on, challenge and support one another absolutely embodies our mission of building a radically connected tech community.”

Jill St. Thomas

“Our primary group goal is to raise awareness about software technology success in the Tampa Bay area, but as individuals we also benefit from shared learning and strengthened connections with our peers.” said Jack Berlin, CEO of Accusoft.

Echoed Jill St. Thomas, Executive Director of Tampa Bay Tech, “The commitment of these leaders to lean on, challenge and support one another absolutely embodies our mission of building a radically connected tech community and they are the leaders working to build Tampa Bay's thriving tech hub.”
