

Recording Artist Hung Yung Terrarist Releases New Video Single “Ain’T iT BiG,” Directed by Holy Hell Documentarian

Fellow Buddhafield Cult Survivors Join Creative Forces For the Very First Time

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, March 23, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Rapper recording artist and survivor of the infamous Buddhafield cult, Hung Yung Terrarist has joined forces with Holy Hell documentarian and fellow ex-member Will Allen, for her new video single, “Ain’T iT BiG,” now on YouTube here <https://youtu.be/1VOfdw4KBqg>

I love Will, he wanted to use one of my songs for the closing credits of his stellar documentary, Holy Hell, but it wasn’t the right fit, so getting to do this music video with him meant a lot to me.”

“Ain’T iT BiG,” is a seductive, wild ride with Hung Yung Terrarist with her signature sexy, edgy, kooky style her fans have come to love and expect.

“Will and I have stayed friends since the Buddhafield came crashing down over a decade ago,” says Terrarist. “I wasn’t reunited with Will for the “Ain’T iT BiG” video because we were hanging out on and off the whole time since it came out that our guru was screwing the pooch. But it sure was fun to work with him and create something so cool from just a green screen and a living room. The song “Ain’T iT BiG” was modeled after Die Antwood’s “Baby’s on Fire” and it’s got 19k views already! Exciting stuff! I love Will, he wanted to use one of my songs for the closing credits of his stellar documentary, Holy Hell, bit it wasn’t the right fit, so getting to do this music video with him meant a lot to me.”

“My dear friend Hung Yung aka to me as Terror, is a fierce force of unbridled talent and humor, with a trained voice that could stop trains or relieved pandemics,” says Will Allen. “This video is a homage to Tokyo teen art porn a la John Waters.”
