STRIVE offers a holistic program with in-demand skills and certifications to propel adults and young adults into careers

STRIVE opened its Atlanta flagship last year to improve economic opportunity in Atlanta. STRIVE Atlanta will continue to deliver the signature STRIVE Career Path program with a track unique to Atlanta—Certified Logistics and Inventory Control—which holds high potential for growing careers for STRIVE students. Classes are held virtually and in-person. STRIVE Atlanta will graduate 350 people within the first three years of full operations, providing a pathway to family-sustaining careers.

"We are very excited to launch our partnership with CarMax to help Atlanta residents connect to family-supporting careers and economic opportunities," said Jomal Vailes, STRIVE Atlanta Executive Director. STRIVE's programs for career training address criminal justice history, a lack of education, underemployment, and poverty, all of which are viewed through a racial lens and act as further barriers to residents' progress in these communities. With a 90% program graduation rate and a 70% job retention rate, our graduates are successful.
