Music wasn't meant to be just listened to; it's supposed to be an experience that the listener takes in.

This music material was specifically produced for surround sound reproductions, which is why the home theater audience will find this collection very valuable as well as any other listener who would like to enjoy exceptional audio quality. Whether you have a 7.1 system or just a stereo headphones, your expectations for stellar quality music will be met. This collection is compiled from the most memorable and beloved classical masterpieces: Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Mahler, Rachmaninoff, Tchaikovsky, and Shostakovich are just a few names of the musical geniuses featured in this collection. The Music Card itself consists of a graphically impressive menu, with the links to download tracks and complete albums as well as educational videos about composers and particular music works. The link to the playback software player is included and easy to download and install. Also, there is an option to download the ISO image file and burn it to BD-R disc to play on Blu-Ray player.

From a creative and listening point of view, it is incredibly interesting and amazing to experience a completely adopted surround mix that can be equally enjoyed in both in stereo and in surround. The secret is in reverberation techniques that was applied on each individual surround channel in order to balance both stereo and surround sound perception as well as to avoid face cancellation. But ideally 7.1 set-up was the reference for the highest user.

Many musical masterpieces of these collection were digitally remastered from original analog masters.

During this very comprehensive work, which actually took several year, many of these works' sounds were transformed into a more modern and new song. Taking this music experience to 3D is really offers you something that you can cherish and behold.
