

Carrie to Kamala: Getting women the vote was the first of many steps to the election of the first female vice president

On April 30, Joe Biden and Kamala Harris will complete their first 100 days in office. The novel "Victory with Valor" celebrates a much earlier milestone.

THOUSAND OAKS, CA , USA, April 16, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Carrie Chapman Catt and Kamala were born more than a century apart but share a trailblazing spirit and ability to achieve goals.

Fact and fiction blend seamlessly to create an engrossing behind-the-scenes story about this international suffrage hero."

Ellen Snortland, woman's rights activist and author of "Beauty Bites Beast"

Carrie, an Iowa farm girl, put herself through Iowa Agricultural College, the only woman in her graduating class. Kamala graduated from Howard University, a Black college in Washington D.C., and the University of California Law College.

Carrie's career moved from law clerk, teaching, and giving speaking on woman suffrage, to leading the National American Woman Suffrage Association as president, succeeding Susan B. Anthony. Kamala's career took the legal, political route as a California district attorney, state's attorney, U.S. senator, and now the first female vice president.

Oddly, both women made history during pandemics. Carrie's suffrage work was nearly derailed by the Spanish flu while Kamala campaigned during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Feminists and history scholars will study the vice president's life and accomplishments for generations to come, and Americans have the 19th Amendment to thank. Without women voters, there would be no women candidates. "Victory with Valor" is inspired by the life, courage, commitment, and grassroots strategy of Carrie Chapman Catt, the remarkable leader of the women's suffrage movement in America and a catalyst for getting the 19th Amendment passed.

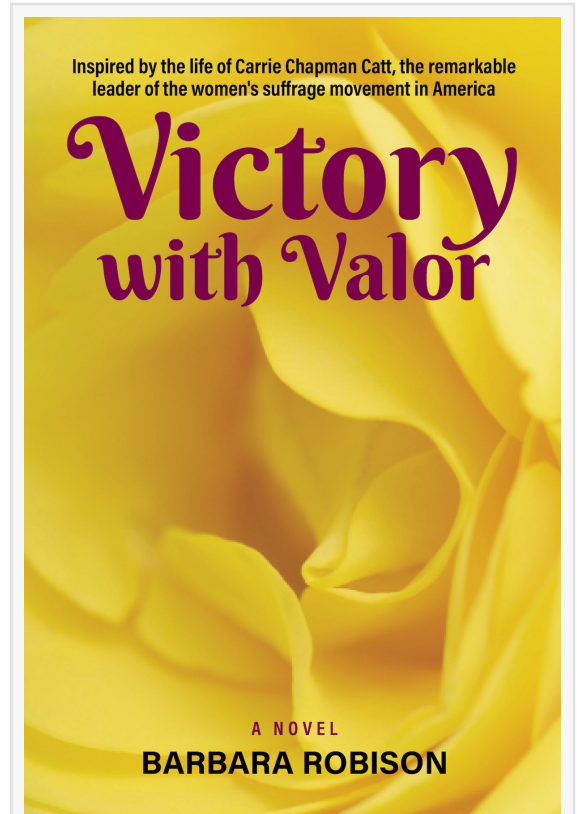

"Victory with Valor" makes a thought-provoking book club choice and the perfect gift for fans of historical fiction. It is available on Amazon as a paperback or e-book.
