The professional pharmacist and successful entrepreneur discusses how family, friends, and role models have impacted his life and career.

SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA , UNITED STATES, April 12, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Javid Javdani, licensed pharmacist and owner of multiple small businesses, is thrilled to announce that he is the subject of a recent interview with an online periodical that specializes in matters of mental health and wellness. The interview, which was published on March 17, 2021, casts a wide net, focusing on everything from deriving joy from work to life priorities.

Asked about his dual professional roles as a pharmacist and as the owner of a grocery store, a restaurant, and a catering service, Javid replies, "I think through both my work at the pharmacy and at my business, I have the satisfaction of helping others." He elaborates that the feeling of joy he gets when dispensing medication and making sure people understand how to use it properly is similar to the feeling of joy he gets when watching elderly immigrants in his grocery store pick out their favorite products from their homelands and smile because they haven't had access to such things for years.

On the subject of maintaining a work/life balance, Javid Javdani confides that "it was very hard in the beginning," as he juggled his pharmacy management responsibilities with the time-consuming challenges involved with cultivating three small businesses, "but right now I make sure to spend time with my wife and daughter." Pressed on how he has any free time whatsoever to do so, Javid answers, "I hire good people to take care of a lot of things with my business."

When queried on his technique for motivating others, Javid references his employees and their own aspirations as an example. "One of my managers wanted to start a business, and I helped advise him on the lease negotiation and other decisions," he says, adding, "(m)y workers appreciate the lengths I go in order to make their lives better, and they are motivated to stick with me and support me in return."
