announces their latest new platform, SIMHEALTH, to serve the needs of the healthcare industry. After extensively working with healthcare and pharmaceutical companies for the last two years, the company is proud to announce the creation of a new platform that is tailor-made to the healthcare industry. Through SIMHEALTH, healthcare organizations can participate in clinical education sessions, conduct patient education seminars, delivered wellness content, along with patient care, live interaction with patients, and share best-practices, anytime...anywhere. The innovations firm is excited to provide a platform for one of the most essential industries in the workforce, their partners, patients, clinicians, learners and/or staff.

“Now all of our current and future clients in the healthcare industry will share our popular platform features, innovative and immersive modules, security, along with our award-winning, intuitive user experiences, within our SIMHEALTH Platform,” said Dr. Manuel Dominguez, founder and CEO of Simulocity. “SIMHEALTH will deliver year round patient and clinical education, patient care, events management, and serve as a virtual center of excellence. Our goal is to increase access to care, education and collaboration, amongst patients, clinicians and staff that are served by healthcare organizations.”

In addition to these features, the platform will also have unique, custom-built applications and integrations made for the healthcare industry in mind, such as an LMS, EHR, Telehealth, Serious Medical Games for Clinicians and Caregivers, Live & OnDemand Events, Healthcare Expo Hall, and much more.
